Child and Family Services' Adopt-a-Family Kicks Off a Season of Giving with Amazon as Lead Sponsor

Buffalo – Child and Family Services' (C+FS) Adopt-a-Family program is back for the 2025 holiday season with Amazon returning as the program's lead sponsor. Operations will be running Monday, December 8 through Wednesday, December 18, headquartered at 824 ½ Delaware Avenue.

For more than two decades, Adopt-a-Family has connected community donors with families receiving services through programs such as Foster Care and Adoption, Community-Based Counseling, Residential Treatment, the Stanley G. Falk School and Youth Assertive Community Treatment (Youth ACT). The program brings comfort and joy to families during the holidays, while also providing resources that they will be able to utilize throughout the entire year.

"We are so grateful for Amazon's ongoing partnership and generosity," said Mary Czopp, Chief Communications and Development Officer at C+FS. "This program lifts a tremendous weight for families at a time that is often stressful. The gifts received now don't just brighten the holidays; they offer stability, relief and encouragement that lasts well beyond the season. Amazon's support makes that possible for so many of the people we serve."

"Amazon is proud to sponsor Child and Family Services' Adopt-a-Family program for another holiday season," said Angela Pinsky, head of community affairs for Amazon in New York. "C+FS does critical work supporting some of our community's most vulnerable families, and we're honored to stand alongside them in that mission. Supporting families in Western New York during the holidays and beyond reflects our deep commitment to the communities where our employees live and work."

This year, more than 350 donors will be matched with 300 families, providing gifts and essentials to over 1,200 individuals across Western New York. The effort is supported by 300 volunteers, who help ensure thousands of items are organized and delivered with care.
